

Jessica Himmelreich joined GEODIS in January 2016 and currently serves as Vice President and Head of Sustainability. Jessica leads the development of a strong corporate social responsibility culture across the Americas region, ensuring that sustainability, safety, and ethical business practices are clearly understood and embedded at every level of the organization. She collaborates closely with GEODIS' human resources, compliance, operations, purchasing, and marketing teams to integrate social and environmental priorities into core business strategies, enabling customers to achieve more sustainable and resilient supply chain solutions.

With more than 20 years of operations and logistics experience, Jessica brings a pragmatic, results-driven perspective to sustainability leadership. Her career spans complex distribution environments, transportation networks, and large-scale operational transformations, giving her a deep understanding of how safety, efficiency, cost, and culture intersect on the front lines of logistics. This operational foundation allows her to translate sustainability goals into actionable initiatives that drive measurable performance improvements while supporting long-term business growth.

A passionate people leader, Jessica is deeply committed to building high-performing teams and fostering a culture of accountability, engagement, and continuous improvement. She believes that meaningful change in logistics starts with empowered leaders and engaged associates, and she is known for developing talent, mentoring emerging leaders, and championing initiatives that put people at the center of operational excellence.

Jessica is also a recognized voice in the evolution of the logistics industry, leveraging data-driven insights and firsthand operational experience to help shape the future of sustainable supply chains. Her work focuses on advancing safety innovation, reducing environmental impact, and aligning operational execution with broader corporate responsibility goals. Through her leadership, GEODIS continues to strengthen its position as a trusted partner delivering safe, responsible, and forward-thinking logistics solutions in a rapidly changing global marketplace.